A CAMPAIGN SONG.

Air—Climbing up the Golden Stair.
The 8th of next November,
Is a date we'll all remember,
Climbing up the White House Stair.
We're for Weaver and for Field,
And a foot we'll never yield,
Climbing up, etc.
We're bound to win the day,
When the People have their say,
Climbing up, etc.
We're going to win the fight,
Because we're in the right,
Climbing up, etc.
Chorus—
Now see the People voting,
'Tis great I do declare,
Ben's on Salt River boating,
While Weaver climbs the White House Stair.
Our silver saved the nation,
And now 'tis our salvation,
Climbing up, etc.
Don't think a single minute,
That Weaver isn't in it,
Climbing up, etc.
With silver on a par with gold,
'Twill bring back the days of old,
Climbing up, etc.
With our money standing sound,
The gold bugs will be downed,
Climbing up, etc.
Chorus—Now see, etc.

Woodburn Disgusted.

The APPEAL learns that Hon. William Woodburn is disgusted with the shabby treatment received at the hands of the county central committee in Virginia City.

They allowed him to pay his own hall rent and let him paddle his own canoe.

Woodburn begins to realize that he was shoved into the fight to allow a list of hungry politicians to bleed Newlands, and as he has never allowed himself to be handled in anyone's interest, he don't propose to be now.

The Chronical gives an idea of the situation in Virginia City.

Notwithstanding the Carson papers stated that the Virginia people were to receive Wm. Woodburn with a torchlight procession, very little attention was paid to his advent on the Comstock. The gentleman spoke to a slim audience in the Opera House Saturday night, the major part of which had congregated through idle curiosity. Mr. Woodburn confined himself principally to a tirade against Senator Stewart. While admitting that Senator Stewart had worked energetically in Congress he contended that many of the measures introduced for the benefit of Nevada would never pass.

Mr. Woodburn threw no new light on the silver question, and the charges he made against Stewart have been refuted so often that his argument had no weight. In regard to himself Mr. Woodburn stated that he was forced on the ticket, and had to stand, even if doomed to defeat. He said he was making his fight single handed and alone, and that he hired and paid for the Opera House himself without receiving a dollar from anyone. He regretted he had no newspaper to champion his cause except an obscure sheet in Carson that occasionally said a kind word in his behalf. Many of the audience felt sorry for the gentleman's predicament, which was palpably made evident by the lack of applause at his utterances. Some of the audience thought something should "drop," as the Enterpriser predicted there would, even if the party managers only took a tumble and lent a hand to their Congressional candidate.

Had Mr. Woodburn gone into the fight lifting his voice as an anti-Harrison anti-Cleveland silver man he would have received an ovation in his old home that would have discounted any demonstration ever made there. The miners now want an independent silver man who has no party collar on him.

Attention is called to the advertisement of Cutts, the grocer. He makes a specialty of selling new groceries. By selling low he keeps his goods constantly changing, and thus he never has shelf-worn goods in his store.

NEVADA CONGRATULATED.

An Old Sagebrusher Who Believes in Silver and Irrigation.

San Francisco, Sept. 4, 1892.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE APPEAL:—I wish, although rather late in the day, to congratulate the people of your State upon the nomination of the Hon. Francis Newlands for Congress, through the columns of the ablest defender of Nevada's interests that is published in the downtrodden State today. I desire to commend the selection of your next Congressman by a people who are in need of a staunch defender of their wonderful resources of silver and an advocate and student of irrigation, who knows more of what water means to Nevada than all of your other Congressional representatives put together.

The silver question and necessity of strong supporters needs no further discussion before your people. That issue will sweep Nevada from the smallest county seat to the electoral college. Neither is there need to echo the uncompromising stand for silver that Mr. Newlands has taken and will maintain. I wish to say a word regarding irrigation, which is of vital importance to your people, and which, although you may lose sight of temporarily, is of paramount importance in the future development of Nevada.

What water will accomplish in your fertile valleys is too well known and acknowledged to require complication here. The question seems to be, where is the water to come from? The answer is that you have it now. Absolutely, as peculiar as that sounds it is so, and Mr. Newlands knows it. To begin with, there are the Carson, Truckee, Humboldt and Walker rivers running actually to waste through plains of unbounded richness. True, in the Summer months they decrease to an alarming extent, and therefore your people. It is no less than shame that to every loyal citizen of Nevada that these splendid rivers are permitted to waste in Summer. It is a shame that for about seven months in the year these rivers are allowed to flow, bounding full, past the thirsty acres and to sink worthlessly in the sand in the form of worthless lakes, which would be better if dried up. It is a shame, because these millions of gallons flow through a country abounding in natural sites for a wonderful system of storage reservoirs. Those billions of cubic feet of water evaporate and sink in valueless mud holes, sliding by unnoticed in the long Winter months, leaving a scanty and much litigated little stream for the Summer, could all be saved. If they were so stored the agricultural possibilities of Nevada would attract the attention of the world, and strange as it may sound, silver would become a secondary thought. It is population that you need, and it will come if the proper legislation is had for water and its storage.

In many portions of the world, vast areas are irrigated by the simplest sort of windmills; here in San Francisco every vegetable gardener in his sandy lot depends on a shallow well and a home made mill. They irrigate hundreds of acres that way. Good wells in Nevada can frequently be found in less than ten feet of digging. Encourage and aid people to develop the windmill system. It never fails. Then with your endless chains of mountains, the chances for artesian water are the very best.

Right today there is not a hole in Nevada that deserves the name of a prospect for artesian water, and still the shallow wells give fair results. Good artesian wells should be perhaps a thousand feet deep or more. Encourage your people by liberal legislation and Congressional aid to try a few deep taps on Nature's reservoirs beneath the surface. Do something to get a start at watering those valleys that can support colonies as easily as they do a few cows and jack rabbits.

Frank Newlands knows all about the truth of these statements and knows how badly Nevada needs concerted action in the way of irrigation. I have lived in Nevada many years myself and have her interests still at heart, therefore I repeat, I congratulate the people of Nevada upon the nomination of Francis G. Newlands. I am confident that they will elect him in a few weeks.

Yours sincerely,

SILVER AND IRRIGATION.
